The Clay-Randolph Duck.

The eccentric duel between Clay and Randolph has had many different versions, but the following, to the best of my information, are the facts: Randolph appeared bright and early on the ground, dressed in a morning gown and slippers. After the distance was measured off and the antagonists had taken their positions, the seconds said, "Are you ready, gentlemen?" The nfollowed the usual "One-two-three." Clay, being an expert marksmen, took deadly aim and fired, carrying away a portion of Randolph's garment, in close proximity to his back. At the same time Randolph discharged his pistol in the air, but, finding that he was not wounded in his garment, he ran up to his opponent, at the same time extending his hand, and in his shril squeaking voice said, "Henry Clay Henry Clay! you owe me a coat! Clay accepted the proffered hand and in his eloquent and dignified manner replied, "John Randolph, I thank God almighty that I am no deeper in your debt." After this event the great statesmen were fast friends until the death of Randolph, which soon after took place in Philadelphia, on which occasion Clay was at his bedside, and one of the chief mourners at his funeral.

A VERY GOOD REASON.

Says Max Adeler in the Philadelphia Bulletin : Judge Pitman came down stairs the other day in response to a call from his servant girl, and found at the front door a man with a curpet bag, who "Is your piano out of tune?" "No, I don't think it is," replied the udge.

"Ain't you sure about it?" "No, I never tried it."

"How long since it has been tuned? "It never has been tuned." "Then of course it ought to be, you ill ruin it if you don't have it attended "I don't believe I will." "Oh, yer, you will though. Nothing is worse for a piano than standing un-tuned." "Do you think you onn tune it." "Certainly I can."

"I don't believe you can."

"I'd like to know why not, I never saw the piano that I couldn't tackle "There is one mighty good reason why you can't in this case. "I should like to know it" "Do you want me to tell you?"

"Well, its because I haven't got any piano.'' The man put his carpet bag under his arm, rubbed his nose thoughtfully

DECATOR, ILLINOIS Saturday Evening, April 154

A special from Carbondale reports the death, at that place, on Sunday last, of Henry Hunter, sr., the reputed slayor of Gon. Pakenham, the commander of the British forces at the battle of millions if they belonged to us instead New Orleans, in 1815. Mr Hunter was 97 years old.

THE Captain General in Cuba has abolished by decree all existing taxes, and announced that revenues hereafter will be collected to the amount of $82,-000,000 annually. Of this sum $16,-000,000 is to be derived from customs and $36,000,000 from direct imposts. In addition, bonds to the amount of $180,009,000, bearing gold interest at eight per cent, will be issued to mortgage whatever property may escape the tax-gatherer. As the population of this island is only 1,300,000, the tax alone amounts to near seventy-five dollars for each person annually. This is simply confiscation of all property.

THE United States Circuit Court of New York has just rendered an important decision concerning erocked whisky. Somo timo ago an Evansvillo distiller, recently convicted of illicit distilling, transferred fifty barrels of whisky in payment of a debt to a man United States as "crooked" and suit entered in the United States Court for its condemnation. The court, however directed a verdict for the defendant on or culture of those around him. the ground that the law does not warrant the forleiture of the spirits. As this ruling is directly contrary to that of the Treasury Department, the case will be probably be appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States

STEWART'S MONEY.

St Louis Globo-Democrat Accer the multitude and variety o suggestions that were made after the death of Wm. B. Astor with regard to the ways in which he might have used his money much better than he did, it is only reasonable to expect that we will be favored with homilies on the text of A. T Stewart. It is so pleasant, and at the same time so casy, to point out the wise and generous uses to which we would put other men's of the other men, that we are at all times ready to take up the topic and to flatter our vanity by sitting in judgment on the short comings of those who have been conspicuous for their wealth The case of Mr. Stewart offers so many parallels to the case of Astor that he can hardly hope to escape consure, and moralists who have great difficulty in making both ends meet will lend a tone of superior virtue to the daily press by showing how sadly Stewart missed the real opportunities opened to him by his vast fortune.

But with all due deference to the moralists, we may ask what is the best use a man can make of his wealth when it far exceeds his needs and runs up into the millions? No one will say that he ought to spend it in costly living, but there are those who will insist that he should seek opportunities of giving. It seems a dreary and a hope less prospect that a man who has $10,-000,000 this year should merc'y have $11,000,000 next year, or $50,000,000 by the time that death comes round. and that he should leave no monument to mark the possibilities of beneficence developed by such an accumulation of wealth. In his coffin the dead millionaire looks as if he would have been in his employ, who shipped it to New quite as well off had he retained only a York for sale. It was seized by the few thousands for himself, and used the vast remainder to solace affliction, to alleviate suffering, to diffuse knowledge, to cievate art, or in any way to make a specific contribution to the welfare.

This is the sentimental view, and it has its origin deep in the essential traits of human nature, it probably has much to commend it; but it may be doubted, after all, whether the rule that made Astor and Stewart rich is not the better rule. The man who gives without any expectation of return does well, but on the other hand, the man who disparaged. THE SLANDERS AGAINST BLAINE.

It is evident that Mr. Blaine's enc mics consider him the man, above all others, who is, at the present time, the prospective Republican candidate for the Presidency. Hence they are put ting forth numerous vile slanders ageinst him, two of which have ap peared within the last week. Une o them was that Mr. Blaine had received from the Union Pacific railroad company a large sum of money for his Congressional influence in its behalf. The story appeared originally in the Indianapolis Seatinel, though it is be lieved to have been concocted in Washington and sent to the Indiana capital probably with the view of making it appear that it was instigated by Senator Morton. This story the railroad authorities immediately "sat down on" with the statement that they had never paid in any way, directly or indirectly, any money to Mr. Blaine for any ser vice or assistance whatever. The othor story was a vilor one, which appeared first in the Nashville Banner, and But Few Charitable Bequests. was from thence copied into that receptacle for all filth, the Chicago Times. The nasty story which was related with all the details with which a provient imagination could invest it, was to the effect that, twenty six years ago, while Mr. Blaine was a professor in the military institute at Georgetown, Kentucky, he seduced a female teach ir in threats of violence and resort to blows, and that he is now living happily: with her at his home in Washington. If Mr. Blaine's enemics think that the best way to crush him is to circulate vile slanders against him and his family, they may find that they have created a sympathy for him which will in sure both his nomination and election to the Presidency .- Peoria Transcript.

Advice on Falling in Love.—Young girls should be exceedingly careful about falling in love with young men, whether rich or poor, who yet remain to be won. They cannot guard their affections too carefully in reference to those whose sentiments towards themselves are as yet unknown. Then, again, when a young lady sits down to devise a scheme for the capture of a wealthy husband, as a general would plan a campaign, we think she enters upon an undertaking which she had better not be engaged in.

The chances are that she will not succeed, and that if she does succeed she will not be happy. Marriago should be the spontaneous union of hearts, as well as of habits. Then the relation contains the elements of happiness, but not otherwise. It has no promise for those who enter it solely from cold calculations of advantage. The RUBBER BUCKETS which are attacked to the Chain will not wear the Tubing, consequently it will last longer than when Motal Buttons are used. It is, positively, ANTI-FREEZING. It is a positive WATER PURIFIER, as each Bucket is const ucted with an AIR CHAMBER, which carries a given quantity of pure air into the water, which immediately diffuses through the entire body of water, purifying and cleaning, and rendering it fit for use.
